represent that city in no flattering aspect. Poverty prevails among the people. There is a sound of loyalty, but there is a more vehement talk of State independence and of the other wild doctrines whereby Texas was led off into secession. Curses deep and loud are leveled at the boastful rebel Generals who swore to defend Texas to the last drop of blood, and surrendered to the Federal authorities the next week without a blow. From the interior come dreadful reports of massacre and violence, the disbanded soldiers meting out swift vengcance upon officers who lorded it over them under strict military discipline, and upon contractors who cared more for their THE latest advices from Galveston asks: contractors who cared more for their cains than for the good of the army. gains than for the good of the army.
